From Heartache to Hope: One Family's Journey to Parenthood

After years of trying, five unsuccessful fertility treatments, and unanswered questions, Trish and Scott are expecting their first child; a baby boy, due August 2025.

But their journey wasn't easy.

Married in 2021, they hoped to start a family within a year. As time passed with no pregnancy, Trish's OBGYN assured her everything was fine. Medication to stimulate ovulation didn't work. A fertility specialist labeled her with "undiagnosed infertility" and the couple attempted IUI five times. Still, no answers. No results.

"I felt like just another number."

Doctors spent five minutes with them, only to brush off their concerns or recommend IVF, which did not align with Trish and Scott's values.

Frustrated but determined, they searched for answers – and discovered NaProTechnology, a holistic approach that respects the couple's values and seeks to uncover the root cause of infertility. They connected with St. Gianna Center and began tracking Trish's cycles with a trained FertilityCare Practitioner.

With your support, St. Gianna Center can expand its reach for families like Trish and Scott's – helping them find the answers and hope they are searching for.

That's when everything changed.

In only two months of charting, their Practitioner noticed red flags in Trish's cycle. Together, they uncovered Trish's severely painful periods, which kept her laid up in bed for days at a time. No doctor had ever asked Trish about this, but St. Gianna Center gently assured her, "This isn't normal."

After being referred to Dr. Carlos Lamoutte, they uncovered endometriosis and scheduled surgery to remove the lesions.

By December – just two months later – Trish and Scott received the positive pregnancy test they had been dreaming of.

NaProTechnology gave Trish and Scott answers when no one else could. They finally felt seen, heard, and cared for. As Scott told us, "We only wish we'd found this sooner."

From the Board:

2024 was a great year of growth. Bringing on a full time Executive Director brought additional expenses, but with that investment has come an expansion of services and new offerings. With financial support from the community, we can fill the gap and continue the Center mission—because every woman deserves to understand and embrace her God-given fertility and health.
